Community Colleges are doing important work educating a large percentage of post-secondary students to become part of a globalized world. As such, it is vital to internationalize the curricula of community college classes. Many instructors are already doing so. This is an opportunity to learn and to share with colleagues across community college departments and campuses how you internationalize your curriculum, and how you intend to move forward with internationalizing the curriculum in the near future. As one of the few conferences in the Southwest designed specifically for Community College faculty, this is a wonderful opportunity for you to teach and learn from each other.
